From the search results page, you can place items on hold to be delivered to your library by clicking the green “place hold” button.

You can also place items on your “for later” shelf if you’re interested in the item, but not yet ready to read it. Your for later shelf is kept in your account and can be accessed at any time. It’s basically a wishlist of items for later.

When you click on an item, you will see details for that item, and a list of all of the available formats for that item. If there are many available formats, you may see “+#” after the formats - click that button to see the rest of the formats.

The item page also displays availability on the right. If the green text says “Available at preferred location,” that means that it is on the shelf at your home library. If you click on “availability by location,” you will see a list of all copies of the item that are currently available in Lakeland, followed by copies of the item that are in the system but are checked out at the moment.

The “On Hold” page shows you all the items that you have on hold at the moment, their status, and where you will be picking the item up.

You can pause the hold if you want to keep it on your account but get the item later.
You can cancel the hold if you no longer want the item.

Note: Our system needs time to process hold requests, so if you try to pause or cancel a hold within 15-45 minutes after placing it, you may receive an error. If this happens, try again later.
